

Between the Light

by Sister

a video project
inspired by the White Lady
of Elysian Park

sisterblood.com

EPMoA
The Elysian Park Museum of Art

Between the Light, 3:00, 2010

Between the Light was inspired by the tale of the White Lady of Elysian Park. According to legend, two young Pachuca sisters were picked up by men in Elysian Park. The men became violent but released one sister because she was menstruating. The other girl was brutally raped and beheaded and her ghost is said to incessantly wander the hills of the park looking for her sister. Some believe that the White Lady is a derivation of the Hispanic legend of La Llorona; the Weeping Woman. She is a tall, thin spirit in a white gown who roams the rivers and creeks, wailing in the night as she searches for her dead children.